Course Description: This course centers around the production and publication of the yearbook. By using MacIntosh Computers students learn to publish by designing sections, writing copy, and taking photographs. Students also learn business skills when they have to design a budget through sales promotions, advertising sales, and fundraisers. (The introduction class prepares them for the computer skills that are necessary in electronic publishing.) This course meets the practical arts credit requirement for graduation.

Prerequisite Courses: "C" average in English (Students must also realize that the class requires some after-school time.)

Applies Toward Graduation Requirements of: 1 Practical Arts credit
